That forecast includes a 1.1 percentage point profit margin, a slight decline from 1.2 percent in the same period last year, according to average analyst estimates compiled by Thomson Reuters. The consensus estimate for the current quarter is for revenue of $47.3 billion, according to Thomson Reuters I/B/E/S, and the average revenue for the same period last year was $49.1 billion. "Apple is a solid business that has momentum," said Colin Gillis, a technology analyst at BGC Partners. Apple has an increasing number of users and consumer spending has been strong. "They are going to have a good quarter," he added. Apple's iPhone shipments are also higher than expected. iPhone unit sales are forecast to be between 35 million and 40 million, according to analysts polled by Thomson Reuters I/B/E/S. That would be a 40 percent increase from 26.5 million last year, according to the average analyst forecast. Apple shares were up 7.8 percent at $467.79 in morning trading on Tuesday. The company's computing, music and media unit is forecast to have revenue of about $10.6 billion in the quarter, according to analysts polled by Thomson Reuters. That would be an increase of 22 percent from $9.3 billion in the same period last year. Apple's average selling price for iPhones is forecast to 3e33713323
