Does anyone know why this is happening? I have made the text in the JLabel a tad large, and in the applet designer I have checked that there is no space in between the text of the label and its container. I thought it may be an issue with the font I am using (chinese characters, but I don't think this would be the case as it is space I would expect to be gone with Japanese characters). I am using Eclipse to develop. When I run the applet I get the error below. I get the same problem if I try to put just the text in the JLabel (and the same problem if I remove the JLabel from it). EDIT: Thanks for all the suggestions guys - I removed the relative properties (they fixed the problem) but I am now getting an error with another piece of text I have in the label. Can anyone think of why this is? (for those who suggested the labels might have not been correctly placed.. the text was in the right place, just spaced wrong) A: Does anyone know why this is happening? Solution: What Eclipse version do you use? Could it be that Eclipse is getting confused over some strange differences between the development version and the shipped version of Java.
