Hello and welcome to another post from Sprin is for Shoes, a new recurring feature where I show you how to make some fun, girly fashion finds! I have to say that I love a good pair of cowgirl boots and I think they are so timeless and elegant, so when I saw this pattern by Zutani, I had to try it out. I could see so much potential in this pattern and I immediately knew I would be making it into one of my latest projects. I wanted to see if I could create a dramatic, fashionable pair of these cowgirl boots that I could wear all year round. You should try to wear your shoes for at least 6 months of the year, even if it's not summer, just wear them for a few months of the year to help their life expectancy and they will last for many years, if not a lifetime. I decided to make mine on the suede leather from the other skirt pattern that I was working on, so I thought that I would bring them together. If you are doing this, I suggest putting them together first, then after getting them put together, do the heel and flap with them. I wasn't sure if I would be able to make them a medium width or wide because the suede leather was very narrow, but I was able to work with it and it's turning out pretty good. You will need to first cut out the boots pattern and the lining, so make sure you have the materials to do that before cutting them out, because I found that this was a very tedious process and I would recommend not doing this. Once you have your suede leather cut out, you will have to attach your leather strip for the heel and the
