Courtesy photos SAN DIEGO — A Marine Corps drill instructor accused of shouting and cursing at a female cadet, slapping her on the buttocks, undressing her while she crouched in a dark shower stall and pulling her hair while pinning her to the ground during a training session has been demoted, the Marine Corps confirmed Friday. Sgt. Louis G. "Lee" Manuel Jr. was demoted to private first class as part of the military's punishment, the Corps said. "The punishment reflects the type of actions performed by the private first class, and addresses the conduct and responsibility he exhibited while employed as a Marine," said Lt. Col. Stephen J. Anderson, Manuel's battalion commander. "The reprimand itself does not directly refer to any specific misconduct, but will be shared with the unit for wider distribution." Staff Sgt. Alexander A. Mabry, 40, of Fresno, Calif., has been identified as the private first class who received the demotion. The drill instructor was removed from his position. He also faces charges, but those have not been made public. The Marine Corps has had a sexually hostile workplace lawsuit since 1992 and, according to the Service Women's Action Network, an advocacy group for women, "while other branches of the military have made commendable progress in creating nondiscriminatory and respectful workplaces, the Marine Corps remains a world leader in reneging on those values." The lawsuit is against five Marine Corps drill instructors who have been sued, some more than once, for sexual harassment and for retaliation. The alleged assault took place in September at the Marine Corps Base at Twentynine Palms in California, according to the lawsuit. The plaintiff, who wished to remain anonymous out of fear of retaliation, had been assigned to a unit that specializes in training Marines for Special Operations. She was forced into a shower stall, where the drill instructor, who was also a sergeant, began yelling at her, using a curse word, and grabbed her by her hair, the lawsuit said. He unbuttoned his pants and forced her to touch his genitalia while she squatted in the shower, according to the lawsuit. He then threw her out of the shower. She was not made to clean up the stall and had to get dressed in a recruit "blouse and skirt," which the suit said is often

Q: Restart Spring application programmatically I'm using Spring application for one of my web applications. I'm doing one sort of security in which i need to restart the application when user logout from the page. I have to find the best approach to do this for entire application is Spring based. I googled and found lot of way for this and did some research on this. Currently doing this by: @PostConstruct public void restart() { System.out.println("Restarting Application...."); SpringApplication.run(Application.class, new String[] {"cmd"}); } @OnApplicationEvent(name="Tomcat restarted") public void onTomcatReStarted() { //Do stuff. } Is there any better approach for this? A: I would recommend you to use the approach which is also used by Spring Boot - Autowired Security Context. If this cannot be fully adopted within your existing environment, then you can keep the approach you are currently doing, but with some minor modifications: Override the default logging in your logback.xml (or in application-logback.xml if you are using logback rather than log4j-web). Filter out the security log messages by doing some log-level filtering. Read any relevant messages from System.out using Log4j2 logger. If you have additional concerns on what you are doing, please post that in your question. EDIT : Another option you can consider is to use a Spring WebSecurityConfigurerAdapter with its server-side component Spring Security. As @dunno says, this is the way to go in Spring Boot. Q: How to unlock an Android app? My app is in "Release" status (developer mode is off) and my app was locked. When I tried to update it I received a message saying "you can't submit this version because it's locked". But I know that I didn't receive the message when I was upgrading my app to a new version in a different channel. When I go to Developer settings and try to unlock the application my previous versions are there, so I went into Version history and unlocked them and they are listed as available. However, when I install one of them it still says that it is not available even
