Best regards; mangareader: #1 resource for Naruto Scans Online.Q: Setting the VB6 Message Box Input Type via VBA Is it possible to directly call a method in a VB6 DLL and set the input type of its message box (the "input type" is the third button on a standard MessageBox object)? I can get the message box to be called, but even doing Me.Parent.GetObject(vbObjectTypeMessageBox) on the object doesn't seem to be enough to give me a message box with "Auto Complete" input capability. Also, if I use Me.Parent.Show(VbMsgBoxShowOption.vbNormalNoFocus) Then my parents desktop background shows through and I can't click on anything else. A: Yes. From You can use this command to open a Message Box in the user interface. This approach removes the need to be compatible with the operating system. Command = Application.MessageBox("Title", "Message", vbOKCancel, vbExclamation) For more information about using the VB6 VBA Runtime Library, use Microsoft's VB6 Reference Guide for VBA. Bluefish is a feature-rich word processing application for programmers and web designers. It offers support for JavaScript, PHP, Perl, C/C++, HTML, Java, Python, Ruby, XML, XHTML and VisualBasic scripts. The main window has two panes: a multi-document window displays all currently open files and a tabbed pane, which includes the Tags and Formatting panes. You can add a file to be opened, select a document, open a file from a list, set the input method and switch the input focus, among other functions. You can insert tags for headings, entities, format (general, by context or layout), tables, lists, forms, HTML5-supported, and others. Other options of the tool enable you to perform conversions (e.g. characters to entities, to lowercase, URL decoding), count words, duplicate lines, generate Lorem Ipsum text, use an advanced search and replace function (e.g. match pattern, scope, case sensitive), and more. The interface is clean and well-organized. Thanks to the Explorer-based folder structure, you can easily navigate directories to locate and edit files.
