FIFA 22 features an all-new Real Player Motion engine, which brings together the talents of lead engine architect Brian Allgeier at Sledgehammer Games and former FIFA video game creative director Hadis Hassabis, who has helped develop AltspaceVR and Google’s ambitious virtual reality social network platform, along with a team of many of the same talented people who brought the engine to life in FIFA 17. All these players, together, went on to make FIFA 22 one of the most successful games in the franchise’s history, receiving a widespread following of players for its depth and innovations in physics, ball movement and more. The team has pulled together a collection of the most substantial gameplay enhancements and new features that you’ll find in the upcoming release of FIFA 22, including: * All-New Real Player Motion Engine (RPM) and physics engine * Revamped Player Intelligence * All-New Visual Referee—Tackle Delegation * Next-Gen Artificial Intelligence * Revamped Visual Tactical Analysis and Under 10 * Enhanced Player Control / Maneuvering * Revamped Skill Stick / Progression Key Features: * The All-New Real Player Motion engine brings new life to the world of football. The system has been optimised for greater speed, responsiveness and AI intelligence while at the same time introducing new features like PhysX, Exocore, GADR and the ambition to bring each player to life. * “The year is 1889. The world is your oyster. Wherever you look, there’s soccer to be played, with players of all shapes and sizes, playing all styles of the game.” * The game engine was rebuilt from the ground up, including a lot of work being done to improve the physics and AI of the player models. * New visual systems have been created to allow for a much greater level of control and detail in the way the game is visualised on screen. Goalkeepers have also been given considerably more possibilities of varied movement in the same way as the forwards. * New AI improvements mean that smaller teams will have a greater chance of tactical dominance. A greater focus on positional play has also been put in place to allow smaller teams to control the game, which equates to greater fluidity in the way the game is played.
