The site is running on IIS and I am running this on the root folder. I get the file to come back correctly to the site: but when I try to get it's properties, it doesn't seem to be returning me anything: FileInfo file = new FileInfo(Server.MapPath("images/logo_version_small.jpg")); if (file.Exists) { Response.ContentType = "image/jpeg"; Response.AddHeader("Content-Length", file.Length.ToString()); Response.WriteFile(Server.MapPath("images/logo_version_small.jpg")); Response.End(); } The FileInfo.Exists function is returning true, but when I run the file.Length.ToString() function, it just returns System.Int32 with no info on it. Am I missing something? Thanks. A: Try to set content-type header to the real one. For example: Response.ContentType = "image/jpeg"; Response.AddHeader("Content-Length", file.Length.ToString());

Response.ContentType = "image/jpeg"; Response.WriteFile(Server.MapPath("images/logo_version_small.jpg")); Response.End(); This way you should have valid length added.
