Holland America Cruise Line to Split Shipboard Activities The cruise line says on Wednesday that its Carnival and Holland America brands will become separate entities. "The new arrangements will create a single integrated, global, cruise line offering — The World's Biggest Cruise Line — with a single cost structure, consistent and transparent pricing, and streamlined delivery and customer service,” the company said in a statement. Holland America Cruises, owner of the Holland America and Princess brands, has agreed to buy out its partner's 49% stake in Carnival Cruise Line, and those proceeds will be used to buy back the 50% of the company it does not own. The company says it has entered into a definitive agreement to buy the 50% stake from Costa Holdings for about US$2.8 billion. The definitive agreement also calls for the companies to form a joint venture. “The combined company will be a great cruise line and will be well positioned to serve the world's guests and deliver significant and measurable economic benefits to our guests, crew, communities, shareholders and the cruise industry,” said Robert O'Byrne, chairman and chief executive of Holland America Cruises. The combined line will have 24 new ships, employing some 50,000 people, and be based out of Miami, and operate more than 10 cruise lines. “Holland America Cruises will operate a single global brand, while maintaining the strong identities of Carnival and Holland America

- NeoGAF: "I am a true fan of Fantasy RPGs, and an old Fantasy RPG player. I played all three Final Fantasy games, every Dragon Quest game, The World Ends With You, Etc. Although like many others I tried out a select number of other popular JRPGs, Final Fantasy was always my goal, always my reason to play, always my source of inspiration. Games like Etrian Odyssey, Higurashi, and Persona, I have tried them all but I always came back to FF. Not this time." - Game World: "The gameplay that I'd been hoping to find in Etrian Odyssey V hasn't been found in IV. This time, all of the elements combine to make an epic game worthy of the name. There is no better way to describe it than that it is massive. From the second you log in until you beat the game, it will have you playing for at least a minimum of 45 hours. It has the most open world of any Final Fantasy game (Yes, The World Ends With You comes in second). This game has about everything that I wanted from my favorite RPG series. It has a land-scale quest that comes with the most comprehensive story I have ever seen in a video game. It's large expansive world provides me with a form of exploration not really seen in previous Final Fantasy games. And it's combat system is, though in some ways still a little strange, I think it's one of the most balanced I have ever seen in a Final Fantasy game. If the player is willing to dedicate the time, this game has it all." - Game Informer: "It's something about Final Fantasy games that set them apart from other RPGs. A seemingly simple system that gives you the opportunity to explore with ease in a huge fantasy world, but which still keeps the complexity hidden. Final Fantasy IX was my first experience of this, and the new game continues the tradition." - Game Maker: "I didn't play Final Fantasy IX. It was too powerful of a game for me. But I played Final Fantasy X and was really impressed with the whole story, especially X's ending. So then I went back and played VII, which was also really good, even though I had never played much of the series. Then it hit me... I know nothing about the mythology of the Final Fantasy series. I know nothing about the land of Ivalice. I know nothing about any of the characters, which is not bff6bb2d33

A methodology for the design and development of a collaborative online web portal for musculoskeletal education. The University of Melbourne has established a collaborative, virtual online learning environment for musculoskeletal care, in which health professionals from both primary and tertiary care backgrounds participate in the delivery of content and learning as a local group, connected across the State. Our overarching aim is to develop learning resources that can be used locally and nationally. We describe the process used to develop our online portal. The role of technology in the process and the value of a robust formative evaluation is emphasised. In developing the model, we considered the features that are typically expected in a learning portal and investigated the requirements and outcomes of applying this approach to a whole new learning environment: one designed to meet the needs of health professionals and of a cross-disciplinary group with expertise in musculoskeletal care. An online, multi-disciplinary portal with a staggered introduction of topics builds upon the existing educational resources which create a comfortable learning environment. It enables students to build their knowledge and research skills, as well as developing their communication and interpersonal skills. This ability to interact through the platform provides an opportunity for students to identify relevant collaborators for their careers. Kris Kris is a Dutch/Flemish
