If I double tap the icon on the home screen or open the app from the app switcher, the iCloud icon opens and I can choose to share the playlists/albums from there. A simple VHS recorder that is designed for the long-term monitoring of fish behaviour is described. It has a capacity of one channel of a standard VHS cassette, has an external analogue-to-digital conversion system and is capable of recording 256 frames/sec at each channel. The tape recorder has been used to investigate the effects of temperature, waterborne sucrose or glucose ingestion and background noise on the behaviour of adults of three fish species. It was found that the three behavioural patterns characterised by three different behavioral modes: ambling, swimming and burrowing, were affected by these treatments. In general, the treatments that resulted in suppressed activity, body movements, or surface activity, all caused a reduction in the incidence of bursts of a component of the burst pattern. The effects of waterborne sucrose (but not glucose) on the behaviour of trout (Salmo gairdneri) and carp (Cyprinus carpio carpio) were dose-related. The effects of waterborne sucrose were evident in all three behavioral modes. This, and the fact that the behaviour was entirely suppressed in instances when the concentration of sucrose exceeded 30% of the diet, suggests that at least some of the observed effects may have been due to an imbalance in the mineral elements, or osmotic properties of the diet. The effects of sugar ingestion were similar in all three species. In contrast, the effects of background noise were not species-specific and were evident in all behavioural modes. The main effects were an increased incidence of pauses and an increased burst duration. The effects of background noise were
