To celebrate the release of Elite: Dangerous: Horizons, Frontier Developments has released a free, soundtrack for The Teladi Outpost, an Elite Dangerous add-on that takes players to a lawless bubble in an uncharted star system where, it's warned, "the system has become a brutal mercenary playground for interplanetary crime. Illegal slaving, corporate coup d'etats, mafia warlords, small-time thugs and politicians: someone's making a killing here!" The players who decide to become the standing order for the system are considered the general, which means they can be anyone, working for whoever pays - or in-between jobs. They have to beat the odds, constantly looking over their shoulder for the irrepressible pursuit of the Hutts, the Rimers, the Marne Caracci... or the elite Imperial Legion. Several of the star system's historical features have been used in the game, but Elite: Dangerous isn't the only series in which this niche game has been expanded. Now Elite Dangerous: Horizons is out, we've been heavily exploring the source material and have put together a mammoth list of the music from The Teladi Outpost. We've covered old cover versions, contemporary artists who've rerecorded the tracks in orchestral format, and composers who've had a hand in other Elite: Dangerous soundtracks. For the indie developers and lucky fans at Frontier, here's the list of scores: Star System Lucius Faustus is a small Sontaran base where players might find a hefty amount of gear. Among the many traders that might complete the facility, four caught our attention: The first one is the Satmosphere Magus, which can be used to search for rare items in local data banks and archives. The Death to the Incomers (Grand Majesty) Intergalactic Syndicate specializes in a range of products, including Vemacs, infected with REX. Brutes are provided by a Mandalectus and Patient Stabler will offer a quick fix. Irregulars House are responsible for weaponry, from planetary disassemblers to stasis pods. Update The game's developers have added the following lines to the description of the Lucius Faustus add-on (thanks to player Lazarus Wolfe): Resources The Lucius Faustus Station is a small Sontaran base on the planet Dieppe, where players can find one or more items that can be sold. The station is based

Ninety-six patients with 102 vaginal fistula-in-ano were treated conservatively by sequential excision of the fistula tract by a single surgeon at a rural hospital in Pakistan. The surgical results were studied with regard to the patient's age, her occupation, the cause of fistula, the degree of inflammation, the size of fistula, the status of the peri-vaginal tissues, the size of the fistula tract, and the recurrence rate.
