Association of FAV1 and SCAR4 homozygous genotypes with severity of systemic lupus erythematosus in Chinese Han population. Systemic lupus erythematosus (SLE) is a chronic autoimmune disease characterized by multi-organ involvements and increased risk of mortality. Genome-wide association studies (GWAS) have identified a number of susceptibility loci for SLE; however, the genetic contributions of these associations are still far from being fully understood. In this study, we assessed association of FAV1 (rs728244) and SCAR4 (rs11222062) with the severity of SLE in a large Han Chinese population, including 1033 patients with SLE and 1794 healthy controls, and evaluated whether FAV1-SCAR4 interaction affects the susceptibility of SLE. Our results demonstrated that SNP rs728244 was significantly associated with SLE, and SLE patients with FAV1 and SCAR4 homozygous genotypes were more likely to have lower disease activity and lower medication use ($P = 0.0022$ and 0.0010 , respectively). The homozygous genetic interaction of these SNPs contributed to a decreased risk of SLE [adjusted odds ratio (AOR) = 0.69 ; 95% confidence interval (95% CI), $0.50-0.94$; $P = 0.018$]. The present study provides new evidence to illustrate the potential importance of FAV1-SCAR4 genotyping in predicting disease severity of SLE and provides novel clues for the molecular mechanisms underlying the pathogenesis of SLE.

Is Jane Hamsher normalizing pedophiles? Is she committing fraud and using a made up name like others to cover her tracks? Is she not? Do these questions really matter? What's new in The Schizophrenic Dynasty Of Müller:

Philip H. Lord and Ben Reeves have been friends since they were 8 years old. I believe they tell on another Star Wars Rebels fan site that they are also siblings, but we don't actually know that for sure. Lord and Reeves have worked together previously on previous kid films (Lord as co-writer and director of the 2007 film, Big Momma's House and Reeves as co-writer and producer of Big Momma's House) and this time around they are joined by Michael Taylor Linsmeier as a co-producer. The Plot "When Jedi Master Kanan Jarrus (voiced by Viet Nguyen) and clone trooper Ezra Bridger (voiced by Tony Hale) embark on a mission to the planet Niima Outpost, they discover that their mission is directed by the sinister General Grievous (voiced by David Oyelowo)." Caution: There's a lot of really negative things to say about this title and I think many of them are rooted in experience and familiarity. Last year's Star Wars Rebels suffered from the fact that Lucasfilm walked away from the project before it was completed. It's unusual for the studio to be involved in this late in the creative process, but Lucasfilm has a reputation for locking into completion on a long list of projects. Despite that, we did get a few things that I think are really good. The fact that many of them are familiar concepts is far from the whole story, but it's still worth talking about them. Let's start with, arguably, the weakest element of the title, Ezra Bridger. Yes, he's a clone trooper and he has shared some first hand battle experience with Kanan Jarrus, but he's not a Jedi and he doesn't put much of an effort into sticking to his Jedi principles. Not much about the character works. These are not entirely unique problems. As a character, Bridger doesn't interact very well with the other Rebels characters in the first episode of the series and his style as a protag in his introduction could use some refinement. But right now he's very much the new kid on the block. The problem is that Bridger is not the point of Star Wars Rebels. Like we've been harping about for some time, Young Jedi Knights (Joshua Alston played Byko in the
