If I go by the Wall Street Journal, I'm counting $1 billion in bets — not profits — and $200 million in interest income in the past two years. Q: How to display an error page in my jsp with thymeleaf while calling my controller with REST API I have a little problem with my Spring Boot application, here it is : I call my controller from index.html with a GET method. I have a little function in this controller to validate my POST request. If the validation fails I call the static resources error.jsp. My problem is that I want to display the error page before my errorController.java controller is called. My Controller : @RequestMapping(value = "/login", method = RequestMethod.POST) public ResponseEntity authentication(@Valid @RequestBody Applicant applicant, BindingResult result, Model model, HttpServletResponse response) { if (result.hasErrors()) { return new ResponseEntity(HttpStatus.BAD_REQUEST); } ... return new ResponseEntity(HttpStatus.OK); } I tried to make my controller extends SpringBootServletInitializer : @Override protected Class[] getInitializers() { return new Class[] {}; } In this case my controller is called with my index.html but the application does not redirect to error.jsp. I tried to make my index.html extends WebMvcConfigurerAdapter : @Configuration public class ApplicationWebMvcConfigurerAdapter extends WebMvcConfigurerAdapter { public void addViewControllers(ViewControllerRegistry registry) { registry.addViewController("/").setViewName("redirect:/error.jsp"); } } In this case my index.html is not called at all. A: I just solved my problem, the solution is to have these two classes : A Controller that will return a json response 0cc13bf012
