Elden Ring

"We watched as the dwarven NPCs and raid bosses leaped and died in the fire of the combat animations. The most distinctive characteristic of the action is that it goes in circles. Then you are faced with a decision, or the next NPC won't be standing in the same spot you faced the orc in." - NeoSeeker "This kind of game leaves me feeling both exhilarated and utterly worn out. It's both a combat sim that has players loving to chew each other's faces off and a fine example of what a game should be all about--generating great, gripping stories." - Gamezebo "This is the first game for the Mac and I hope it's not the last, as it is by far my favorite game of the year." - Joystiq "I made my way through the manual impatiently, the pages getting covered with to-do lists scribbled in my silver-backed notepad. As a younger child, I'd often read fantasy novels, and as a teenager in my second year of high school, I'd organized a fanzine about gaming that had a 'general gaming' section in the middle of the zine that discussed video games in the context of roleplaying. My friends and I had played a fair number of roleplaying games during that time and we published the zine for our friends, so all in all, I knew the concepts." - Geeky-Dad Blog "Whether your style is the typical hack-and-slash of modern day video games or the turn based strategy games of yesteryear, there is bound to be an RPG style that's right for you." - MacWorld "The gods have the right idea, as this game is nothing but role-playing fun." - USgamer "The action is fast, frantic, and challenging, and players can control their allies and enemies in different ways." - GameInformer "The Mac port of Elden Ring is exactly what I wanted the original game to be. The graphics are modern and the story compelling and the character development is nice and deep." - RPGFan "Elden Ring is a must for Mac gamer fans of the classic JRPG style of gaming in a this day and age, or just for anyone looking to try an awesome game." - RPG Vault "Lots of people who remember the fond bff6bb2d33
