The new player movement features on the new next-generation FIFA engine the 'ZIK engine' - a combination of the latest advances in video game technology and the technology from 16 years of motion-capture data collected from real footballers. Players will be able to move in real-time, react to challenges and make more intelligent decisions during gameplay. "In the world of technology, we call this technology 'hyper.' When you move an object or when you put a force on an object, it jumps to another place," said Peter Drinnan, Senior Producer at EA SPORTS. "With this next generation technology, we have taken real-life player movements and actually put them on the screen. You see the player and they react to what you're doing - your touches, your movements, everything. It's a very exciting technological breakthrough that I think will really push the game forward." Drinnan continued: "We captured 22 players participating in an ultra-intense five-hundred meter sprint, so we have 22 really high-intensity movements that you can get immersed in. That's the first step in bringing the game to life." The player motion capture was recorded in Manchester, England in Spring 2012, and during the recording, the professional footballers performed their best full-field sprints around the five-lane Olympic-sized swimming pool the players had been using for two days while filming. The footage was recorded in high-fidelity high-definition using a sophisticated motion-capture system, using a sampling frequency of 120 frames per second. The development team at EA SPORTS found that the new 'HyperMotion' technology also enables more fluid movement on the pitch and enhanced transitions between actions. Players are always more responsive to the challenges on the pitch and understand what their actions are doing in context. With more realistic movement on the pitch, gamers will be able to experience the intensity of what it takes to be a top level professional player. "It is important to us to make sure we capture the physicality of the athlete," said Drinnan. "We want to be able to see the footballer react to what's going on around him. That's something that you can't get with performance capture. The results are exciting. The goal for us is to make the player react in a more natural way." As previously announced, the new animation system is intended to be used in combination with the new next-generation FIFA

FIFA is a journey where you take the role of a football legend and create your own legacy on your way to becoming the greatest. FIFA is powered by Football, the authentic emotion of the beautiful game brought to life by the world's leading sports video game publisher. FIFA is set in the present day and lets you take on the role of a football legend and create your own legacy. EA SPORTS FIFA is built on FIFA's gameplay engine, a next-generation computing platform that is designed to bring its players closer to the game than ever before. "Our position as the number one sports video game publisher only grows with each year, and based on feedback we have seen from recent research, FIFA is the world's number one sport franchise." "In years past, FIFA was the only video game on which you could change teams and play as the other team. It was more about physical pleasure rather than having a great footballing experience. In FIFA 16 we recognised the need to change this. We also know that the most important component of playing the game of football is to get into your own position and understand the game. So FIFA 16 introduced the Position Control and new Focus Events, which make it possible to be in control of each situation and make the right decision, in addition to scoring goals in spectacular fashion." "For our development teams, there have been huge advancements in the areas that allow us to release exciting games on the high fidelity of PlayStation 4 and Xbox One, that is to say, console games that are more realistic. In order to make them, they need to be made closer to the real thing, to make a game that is closer to the feeling of being on a grass pitch.” This new generation of FIFA brings you closer to the action. It allows you to take on the role of a football legend and create your own legacy. New Direction of Modern Football EA SPORTS FIFA 22 brings you closer to the action than ever before through fundamental gameplay advances: Position Control / Focus Events/ Drives FIFA connects to the nuances of real football through its immersion and game mechanics. Players will be able to control the flow of play via close proximity to the ball. The new Position Control system will be incorporated directly into the game, and players will be able to choose their position on the field, as well as the type of play they want to
