[HD Playback] Dil Se: Yesterday And Tomorrow Full Movie (India.Read more about Top Story In early 2013, the Government was taken by surprise when India, which imports about half of its petroleum needs, and had already been obliged to restrict imports of crude oil from Iran, in order to protect the interests of Indian refiners against importers and traders in the country, took the unusual step of seizing millions of barrels of Iranian oil, citing non-payment of dues to Iran by Indian refiners. At this time, refiners were of the view that there were many more Iranian oil cargoes on the way, and the seizure might have become only a temporary measure, but it turned out that the Indian Government learnt a lesson. Since then, India, through its friendly manoeuvres, has made Iran a part of the US-led sanctions regime on Iran, and it has also established multiple channels of trade with Iran in various sectors, including petrochemicals, power, gas, high technology, aviation and space and energy, etc., as part of this approach to ensure that it has a great degree of influence over the Iranian economy. However, while the Indian Government was successful in making sure that Iran was kept out of the US sanctions regime, it failed to convince Europe and even US President Barack Obama to do the same in exchange for a possible global Iranian sanctions waiver. Instead, the European Union has continued to insist that oil sanctions on Iran must be strictly maintained; but at the same time it has made it clear that it has made some concessions by refusing to impose sanctions against Iran with regard to conventional goods, which was also included in the interim nuclear deal signed in mid-2014. Iran has also made it clear that any agreement with the US and others will be
