- Crack free download Newskeygen. free versionA heterozygous RCH1 mutation causes a novel phenotype of Recurrent Hemorrhagic Fever with Fever and Severe Hematologic Syndrome in China. Recurrent Hemorrhagic Fever with Fever and Severe Hematologic Syndrome (RHF/FS) is a severe tickborne illness caused by the nairovirus tick-borne encephalitis virus (TBEV) with worldwide distribution. Although most cases have been reported in Russia, China has seen a sharp increase in the number of cases over the last decade. We reported a novel RHF/FS case with a heterozygous point mutation in RCH1, the major receptor for TBEV. A Chinese female patient presented with fever, headache, vomiting, and dysarthria and experienced twice in 4 years. The clinical symptoms were similar to those of HFRS. A detailed epidemiological investigation revealed that she had had an eczema-like rash on her back in 1987, which developed 1 month before she was admitted to hospital. The diagnosis of RHF/FS was confirmed by identifying TBEV in serum and a probable course of HFRS. Direct sequencing of the entire RCH1 gene revealed the presence of a heterozygous transversion of c.2074C>T (p.Pro692Ser) in exon 7 of the RCH1 gene, which is reported for the first time in this study. We suggest that a point mutation in RCH1 could be the cause of HFRS in China. It has long been desirable to determine the propulsive force of a boat. The motive force of a boat refers to the force required to move a boat over the water. It is desirable to determine the amount of the motive force which is due to the boat's weight, as opposed to the force which is applied to the water by the boat during propulsion by a person. Thus, it is very important to determine what proportion of the motive force is due to boat weight. There are many devices known in the prior art for measuring the weight of an object, such as a boat. Thus, for example, see U.S. Pat. No. 3,147,250 to Christian; U.S. Pat. No. 3,543,261 to Dowdell, et al.; U.S. Pat. No. 4,266,148 to Ramoglia, et al.; U.S. Pat. No. 4,580,
