As expected, Republican Donald Trump and Democrat Hillary Clinton emerged the big winners in the polls, with each winning more counties than they lost. Other than Trump, however, the margins of victory and losses have been fairly close - and the West Virginia Democratic primary could have been very different if not for Bernie Sanders. Clinton won 62.7 percent of the vote in the state, compared to Trump's 35.7 percent. Bernie Sanders won 18.3 percent, while Trump-backed John Kasich and Ted Cruz each won 1.9 percent of the votes. The map below shows how the state's 172,000 voters broke down, with Clinton winning all but six counties and Sanders winning all but five. More than 34,000 voters cast a ballot for Sanders, though those numbers have not yet been reported. They are expected later this week.Q: How to make an array from a loop in php I can't change the logic below, please do not suggest other ways.
