However, the learning curve is a steep one. When you first open Photoshop, you'll have to familiarize yourself with layers, paths, clipping paths, masks, fill and adjustment layers, and color modes. It may take a while to learn this software. There are many resources available to help you use Photoshop. Books are available for beginners, and there are many online tutorials as well, including some that are free. Also, many online courses are available to get you started with this software. Scroll down to learn more about the basics of Photoshop, how to navigate it, and how to use the controls. This book was written for novice and intermediate Photoshop users. If you are already familiar with Photoshop, you can skip to the end of this chapter. The Basics of Photoshop Photoshop is a raster image editing program. Although it is not suitable for some types of edits, it has the flexibility and usefulness to make things easier for the average user. Its most common use is for cropping or resizing images. (Some other editing software, like Lightroom, is better suited for other types of edits.) The GUI, or Graphical User Interface, consists of a workspace window, three panes with tools on them, and a Help window. To find your way around the workspace window, read the next section, How to Use Photoshop. Photoshop has a zooming feature that enables users to zoom out and view a scene at a greater distance. For the purposes of image editing, though, Photoshop has no "zoom to fit" capability. The Panels (a.k.a. Layers, Groups, and Tracks) The layers pane The Layers panel is the main editing tool in Photoshop. It includes all of the editing and comping tools that are on the bottom right of the workspace window and is used for creating or manipulating layers and paths. The Layers panel is used to cut and paste layers on top of other layers, to move layers, to create new layers, to colorize layers, to change layer opacity, and to create layers from shapes and patterns. The Layers panel has two main panes: the Layers window and the Image window. The Layers window displays layers along the bottom of the window. All new layers are created and must be added to the Layers window before they can

Q: Regex to find all text in front of "-" I need to be able to find all instances of this symbol: - But not end the search after the first instance. For example: The product is excellent. I like what you did with your latest book. - Compare, Never Compare. should return, "I like what you did with your latest book" The product is excellent. I like what you did with your latest book. - Compare, Never Compare. - I like what you did with your latest book. - Compare, Never Compare. should return, "I like what you did with your latest book" The product is excellent. I like what you did with your latest book. should return, "I like what you did with your latest book" I don't want to find the first instance like this: The product is excellent. I like what you did with your latest book. Should return, "The product is excellent" It's probably the easiest thing in the world to code if you only want one result, but there are times when it's important that it also find the next/previous instances. Edit: I have a long string that I am trying to clean up. It might start with - but not always. It could also be anywhere in the string. It is generally two lines, with a "-" on the left, and a comma on the right. - Some text here. The product is excellent. I like what you did with your latest book. - Compare, Never Compare. Some text here. The product is excellent. I like what you did with your latest book. - Compare, Never Compare. - Some text here. The product is excellent.
