As Autodesk's first drawing program, AutoCAD has been available for over 25 years. It has sold more than 18 million copies, and AutoCAD has won awards for product excellence. AutoCAD 2013 was developed and released in 2013 by Autodesk. The application was built on a new technology platform, AutoCAD LT. The first release of AutoCAD LT was followed by the release of AutoCAD 2014. In addition to the basic version, AutoCAD LT includes features such as 3D drawings, part and assembly information, 2D and 3D presentation, and DWG export. AutoCAD LT is a part of the industry-standard Windows operating system, and is available in two editions — Standard and Professional. On July 26, 2014, Autodesk revealed it would discontinue its FLASH plug-in for AutoCAD. On September 12, 2016, Autodesk announced the availability of AutoCAD 2020 for Linux. PC and mobile In 2006 Autodesk released AutoCAD R14, which was dedicated to the native PC architecture of Windows and Mac OS X, and AutoCAD LT for Mobile (formerly XRMobile) for the iPhone and iPod touch. In the native PC versions of AutoCAD, users can use the interface either by keyboard, using a mouse (and a cursor control device) or by a touch screen. The touch screen control allows users to select objects, switch to drafting mode, and draw lines and arcs with the tip of their finger. The iPhone and iPod Touch version of AutoCAD allows users to zoom in and out on a 2-dimensional drawing by pinching or spreading their fingers on the screen. The iPad version supports both finger pinching and 2-dimensional multi-touch gestures. AutoCAD MX (Mobile EXchange) is an AutoCAD-based app for Apple iOS that can run AutoCAD drawings on the iPhone, iPod Touch and iPad devices. The app allows users to open AutoCAD drawings from a local computer or directly from other apps on iOS devices. AutoCAD XL (XLE) is a version of AutoCAD that supports the Windows 7 interface. It was first released on June 12, 2010. AutoCAD LT Mobile, formerly known as XRMobile, is a version of AutoCAD LT that is optimized for mobile devices, such as the iPhone, iPad, and iPod touch. The software was first released on January 19, 2009. It is based on AutoCAD LT 10.5. AutoCAD LT Mobile, formerly known as XRMobile, is a version of AutoCAD LT that is optimized for mobile devices, such as the iPhone, iPad, and iPod touch. Archive for August, 2010 Glenn Greenwald calls it "one of the worst and most misleading claims of the Obama administration," and with reason. By the conservative activist group Judicial Watch, it appears to be the sort of thing you don't get to take as proven fact if you aren't a Wall Street Journal. The claim? Judicial Watch, a conservative advocacy group that investigates the activities of the federal government, accused the White House of trying to "eliminate transparency" over the Internet and has filed a Freedom of Information Act request to obtain more information on the terms and conditions of the new health care law. The group said it filed the request because of "significant changes" made to the Internal Revenue Service by Obama's director of tax policy. The group said the changes should be subject to public disclosure because the agency is one of the law's main implementers. The article goes on to note that (click for a larger version): "The new Obamacare law, which most Republicans have said they will repeal, requires all citizens to have health insurance by 2014 or face penalties," Judicial Watch said in its blog. "The law also requires all employers with 50 or more workers to offer health insurance or pay a penalty of $2,000 for each worker, and mandates that individuals purchase health insurance by 2014." In an apparent reference to the IRS, the group asked for any "communications concerning what the tax agency's 'business hours' will be for the 2014 tax year." It also asked for any communications "concerning the organization's contentions that the IRS exempts certain communications from its Freedom of Information Act (FOIA) search process
