I have a Users table and a Types table. In Users I have a field called types that has a bunch of types that the user can be allocated to. To get this working I am using the concept of a UsersTable.php as this gives me the classic CRUD interface. In UsersTable.php I have the following fields: $this->hasMany('Types', array('order' => 'types.created_at ASC')); $this->hasMany('Memberships', array('foreignKey' => 'user_id', 'order' => 'memberships.created_at ASC')); So I am using a couple of ManyToMany relationships and the association works as expected.

Here is where the issue is. In the types table I have this:

```
$this->hasMany('Users', array('foreignKey' => 'type_id', 'foreignKey' => 'user_id', 'through' => 'UsersTypes', 'order' => 'users.created_at ASC'));
```

This is all ok and the association works. In the admin section it lists all of the user's associated types. No issues there. I have a UsersTypes field in this table that is a related field to the User. The issue is that this field isn't a true ManyToMany relationship. If I add the following validation rules to that field:

```
$this-> 6d1f23a050
```
